FOREWORD

These pictures tell our story —
Variations on an ideal.

The ideal—that of achieving the true worth from our education, of embodying the Oglethorpe spirit and allowing it to motivate us as we strive and seek for those things most valued.

The variations—Sequence, Spirit, and Synthesis. Sequence as shown in the transmitting of knowledge from professor to student. Spirit derived from active participation in all school events and activities. Synthesis as depicted by the culmination of spirit and knowledge—the necessary constituents of the ideal.

The editor and her staff submit this book as a pictorial representation of the Oglethorpe ideal.

SYNTHESIS

ON IDEAL

The most that we have, our thoughts, our experiences, our hopes, and our dreams are symbolized by this book which we, the 1961 Yamacraw staff, dedicate to . . .

MR. LEO BILANCIO

who we believe to be one of the most inspiring faculty members at Oglethorpe.

His friendliness and profound interest in his students and their progress tend to promote and encourage individual initiative and also to emphasize his own imaginative character. And, to quote Whitehead, "imagination, which is necessary to carry out the proper function of a university—the imaginative acquisition of knowledge, can only be communicated by a faculty whose members themselves wear their learning with imagination."

Because this so aptly describes Mr. Bilancio's personality and character, and because he is always thought of with feelings of gratitude, respect, and deepest affection, we think he epitomizes those qualities which constitute the Ideal which we ourselves are ever striving to achieve.

SEQUENCE

More than 2,000 years ago the ancients symbolized learning by a torch passing from hand to hand down the generations. That lighted torch is the symbol of imagination—the imaginative acquisition of knowledge. —Whitehead

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS...

The theme of the 1961 Yamacraw, "Progressions—Variations on an Ideal," together with the organization of this book, suggests a musical development. A college experience is like an important movement in a large musical composition which could be described as a more or less patterned or organized life. This movement or progression involves the relationships of the climactic synthesis or awareness of interrelatedness. In a sense, this is the ideal of the university.

The importance of this progression lies in the fact that no subsequent movements in the whole living composition will be the same, because of the influence of the "progression and variation" in the college movement. A senior once told me that in his senior year his courses, his intellectual experience, his reading, his relationships to other students, and his understanding of himself seemed to fall into place in a sort of stable structure or synthesis. That is to say, the college experience seemed to form out of its disparate parts a meaningful pattern.

It would be naive to assume that, in this dynamic society, a pattern derived out of college would be permanent. New movements, new themes, will be introduced in unpredictable variation. But if the college experience has been highly significant, it will at times appear, as in the case of a fugue, to overlie the structure of subsequent experience.

To each the movement of college experience is rubato. To some it has moved its culmination in a quiet adagio movement. To others it has been allegro con spirito. It is our hope that for each student the movement may have had direction in meaning.

In a world that appears fragmented, diverse, and at times chaotic, the intellectual and emotional experience in college may demonstrate the possibility of resolution of discords, of stability of motive, and constructive form. Recognition of this form sometimes does not appear during college experience but as a result of post-graduation perspective. At Oglethorpe this should involve ways of looking at oneself, at man, at governments, at religion, at science and art in such a way that these separate elements may, with the help of books, teachers, and our fellow students fall into a pattern that may be described as "progressions—variations on an ideal."

“ON THE ISLAND”

Of our four years spent on these premises, the following is a slight record of those years that now become Madras memories fading into the conglomeration of life.

In one short year

We survived orientation, Rat week, a cold hayride, our first final examinations;

We looked forward to basketball games (in those days we became good losers), caring for Budda, Christmas vacation.

We dreaded low grades, Mondays, financing our Black and White formal.

We learned logic, what friendship could be, the value of a dollar;

We became Sophomores.

We were hated by the Freshmen, loved by ourselves, tolerated by the faculty;

We participated in projects, athletics, publications, clubs and committees;

We sweated Economics exemption, Greek notebooks, our sloppy tennis game;

We became Juniors.

We grew academically, mentally, and in stature;

We got sick, drunk, ambitious, serious;

We spent nights with Ogg and Ray, dancing, talking, falling in and out of love;

We waited for Dr. Reser's test grades, late dates, the long, hot summer of '60 to pass—

We were Seniors.

We had set our goals, had one more chance to prove ourselves, had come of age;

We now know the value of the previous years;

We said goodby to cafeteria lines, bull sessions, our last Oglethorpe spring;

We shall hope we show our thanks to Dr. Agnew, Dr. Seward, and the whole gauntlet of faculty by what we do “on the mainland;”

We have left things done and undone, our own special mark, maybe;

We have begun other years somewhere else

THE POWER BEHIND THE PETRELS

MOMENTS OF VICTORY

MOMENTS OF CONCENTRATION

MOMENTS OF LIGHTHEARTEDNESS

VICTORIOUS PETRELS

PETREL POTENTIAL PUZZLING?

How good were the 1960-61 Oglethorpe basketball Petrels? This is a question which will never be answered. After convincing victories over the University of Tampa and Stetson University in the 25th District NAIA playoffs, the road to fame was suddenly blocked by unheralded Peru State College of Nebraska. Morris Mitchell and associates gallantly went down to defeat in the first round of the national small college tournament in Kansas City, Missouri. Most observers felt that the Petrels, who had won twenty-one ball games and lost only three up until this point, suffered a severe case of tournament nerves which resulted in their cry, "wait til next year".

As usual the Petrels were anchored by a stingy defense, but the revised "wheel offense" also gave the fans something about which to cheer. With Coach Garland Pinholster again sweeping Coach of the Year honors in Georgia the Petrels simply out classed many of their opponents although their performance in the national tournament was not indicative of their strength during the regular season.

The 1960-61 Petrels will never know if they warranted the number four position that tournament officials seeded them; however, the cry, "wait til next year", combined with the "Stormy Petrel Spirit" will be a basis on which the hopes rest for another trip to Kansas City. The Petrels and their supporters are anxious to show just how good Oglethorpe basketball is. Good luck next year!

B TEAM

While the Varsity was preparing for a trip to Kansas City, B-Team basketball got its start this year as Oglethorpe continued to develop its athletic program into one of which students, faculty, and alumni can be proud. Under the direction of student coach Wayne Dobbs, the "Baby Petrels" completed the season with seven wins and eight losses. Although the record was not particularly impressive the "Baby Petrels" displayed an enthusiastic approach which has long characterized athletic teams of Oglethorpe.

Accompanied by its own cheerleaders and a surprising amount of student support, the team went into every game to play defense and outscore the opponents with the same ardor and courage that their "bigger brothers" did. However, they found that spirit and courage alone do not insure victory. Nevertheless, these lads are to be commended for their part in making this an outstanding athletic year on the Oglethorpe campus.

June 4 — GRADUATION DAY — What Does It Symbolize?

Each student receiving his diploma is doing so because of his initiative and desire for the acquisition of knowledge, of a knowledge which was sought to enlighten him about himself and the world in which he lives. Both have found their expression in long, tedious hours of hard work and study.

All may not be recognized publicly. But as time passes each will recognize within himself his accomplishments and how he, too, has achieved something that is his alone and which will prove to be his most valuable asset as he faces the future.

To the Senior Class of 1961 we express our congratulations and sincere best wishes for a happy and prosperous life.

The Yamacraw Staff

A MESSAGE TO THE CLASS OF 1961

Now that you have earned the grand achievement of an Oglethorpe University degree, you have only a moment to bask in its glory. The life you have chosen awaits you impatiently.

It is natural to look with some trepidation upon the unknowable future, but we who have preceded you can assure you that your Oglethorpe education has prepared you well for what lies ahead.

We welcome you into the ranks of the National Alumni Association which comprises many distinguished alumni in nearly all fields of human effort. We know that, in time, you will add to its stature.

Our congratulations and best wishes go with you.

What is Success?

It's struggling on with the will to win, but taking loss with a cheerful grin; it's shar-
